

Microsoft opened Linux-driver code after 'violating' GPL

Contributed by LXer Linux News
Thursday, 23 July 2009

Microsoft was in violation of the GPL (General Public License) on the Hyper-V code it released to open source this week. After Redmond covered itself in glory by opening up the code, it now looks like it may have acted simply to head off any potentially embarrassing legal dispute over violation of the GPL. The rest was theater.

Microsoft was in violation of the GPL (General Public License) on the Hyper-V code it released to open source this week. After Redmond covered itself in glory by opening up the code, it now looks like it may have acted simply to head off any potentially embarrassing legal dispute over violation of the GPL. The rest was theater.

Read more at: http://go.theregister.com/feed/www.theregister.co.uk/2009/07/23/microsoft_hyperv_gpl_violation/.